Sustainable sourced IPE wooden deck flooring has been used in this patio overlooking the side garden by Amit Khanna Design Associates.

AMIT KHANNA,

Principal Architect, Amit Khanna Design Associates

A designer can add or alter the feel of a given space by treating the floors differently. Apart from choosing a material, there are also several patterns and colours, to match every style. Furthermore, depending on the function of the space, the solutions vary. While commercial spaces need to be impressive to welcome the clientele, residential spaces must satisfy the needs of everyday life. Other factors that determine the type and design are maintenance and cost. The trends in flooring options today are the deceiving kind, where a tile can be taken for wood, concrete or fabric, conveniently saving on the cost of the original material. One can find a vinyl strip, used to envelope withered stone flooring and presume it to be wood. Manufacturers have also explored the possibility of 'digital prints' in flooring, which can significantly change the look of an interior.
